A Georgia Draft Board Speaks

The CIO Is Asking for It

Americans, like the English, have the sporting instinct which demands that all sides of a question be heard and that all citizens be given an equal break under the law. But there is a growing unrest in the agricultural sections against government tolerance of strikes in the industrial areas, the presumption among farmers being that the boys in the factories are trying to profiteer in a national emergency. Therefore a draft board in rural Georgia made an astounding declaration of policy Friday.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

Up in the Air

To keep up with the times, you must have your mind up in the air, where the planes of this modern age are flying. See if you can soar to a high score on these questions about warplanes.

1. Distinguish between a Messerschmitt and a Wellington, two types of belligerent warplanes.

2. What is meant by the dive-bomber pilot's "blackout"?

3. Where is America's "West Point of the Air"?

4. About how many planes is the U. S. now sending to Britain each month?

5. What nation is building the world's biggest bomber?

Plane Worker Runs Amuck in Bendix Factory

Thousands of Dollars Worth of Models, Machinery Destroyed

BENDIX, N. J.—(P)—The Passaic Herald-News said in a copyrighted article Saturday that a civilian employee had run amuck in the Bendix Aviation Corp. plant here destroying machinery and models valued into the hundreds of thousands of dollars and setting back production of some articles as much as four months.

Neither Bendix officials nor the FBI office at Newark would confirm or deny the story.

The Passaic newspaper said the man ran through the plant of Bendix, pioneer instrument division, swinging in each hand a metal housing which weighed more than 10 pounds. One object which the newspaper said had been destroyed was the model for a drift indicator that had taken months to build.

The plant is devoted to precision instruments for aviation, among them parts of the secret bomb sight.

All Ford Plants Are Shut Down

Strike at Detroit Stops Work for Thousands

DETROIT.—(P)—Production in the gigantic industrial network of Ford Motor Co. plants was halted Saturday by a CIO strike as completely as were the automotive operations of General Motors and Chrysler corporations during the 1937 "sitdown" of the same union.

The strike of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) at Ford's Dearborn River Rouge plant, largest industrial unit in the world, forced the company Friday to order closing its assembly parts and other branch producers in 41 other communities throughout the nation.

Suppliers from whom the company said it has purchased 11 million dollars' worth of material weekly since January 1 were notified to stop further shipments.

Far-Reaching Strike

DETROIT, Mich.—(P)—Virtually every wheel in Henry Ford's gigantic mechanism for manufacturing automobiles in America, all governed by a single cog in Detroit, stopped turning Friday night.

The paralysis gripping the great River Rouge plant, strike-bound by the C. I. O. United Auto Workers three days, seized 34 manufacturing plants and assembly sites elsewhere in the nation, and there was no hope for an early peace. A Ford representative said regarding the 34 branch shutdowns:

"At the same time the company notified its suppliers in all parts of the nation to stop further shipments on outstanding orders. This probably will affect indirectly thousands of additional workers all over the United States."

The total idle from plant shutdowns, including Rouge, was placed at 118,000.

I. A. Capizzi, Ford lawyer, flew to Washington to confer with Secretary of War Stimson, ostensibly in regard to the company's $155,000,000 in defense orders.

Capizzi took with him, the company said, evidence of "activities of Communists" in the Rouge strike. There was no further word of his plans.

All three were injured when an Eastern Airlines plane in which they were passengers with 11 others crashed in a swamp near Vero Beach, Fla., during a violent thunderstorm. All aboard were rescued by boats from near by points.

Dr. and Mrs. George Crile, Cleveland, Ohio, are removed from crashed EAL plane in swamp near Vero Beach, Fla., by Coastguardsmen manning outboard motor boats. Mrs. Crile is sitting up while Dr. Crile reclines on stretcher.

Diplomatic Relations Are Virtually Ended, Say Nazis, and Slavs Close Frontiers

Gayda, Italian Spokesman, Gloats Over U. S. Strikes, Saying They Spell Social Revolution in America

BELGRADE.—(P)—Yugoslav relations with Germany ebbed swiftly Saturday and the Balkan kingdom appeared on the verge of war.

Government circles declared gravely that the "zero hour" had arrived and a neutral diplomat with close government connections asserted "the diplomatic stage has ended" with the "new stage" just a matter of days or hours away.

(Authorized foreign office sources in Berlin, echoing these ominous words, said that for all practical purposes German-Yugoslav diplomatic relations have ceased to exist.)

Yugoslavia's frontiers with Germany and Italy and Nazi-dominated Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania were closed.

Danube Closed

(The Hungarian official news agency said in Budapest that Yugoslavia had suspended all Danube river traffic in the sections fronting Yugoslav territory.)

An extraordinary session of Premier Simovic's cabinet ended in the early morning hours and a semi-official source said that "the critical foreign question had been discussed."

Telephone communications with Bulgaria and Rumania were severed. It was difficult to get calls through to Germany and Italy and only diplomatic calls were accepted for Hungary.

Squadrons of Yugoslav fighter planes roared over Belgrade shortly after noon and headed toward the Hungarian border where Hitler is reported to have massed huge Nazi forces.

The most likely explosion point apparently was the Hungarian-Yugoslav frontier.

Virtually Isolated

With Yugoslavia virtually encircled by the Axis and Axis satellites only her border with friendly Greece on the south and the Adriatic coast on the west remained open.

One of the last passengers to get across the Hungarian border was George Wadsworth, U. S. consul general to Jerusalem, who was en route to a new post in Rome.

The Yugoslav military established Saturday "a war press bureau."

The U. S. legation remained open day and night. American minister Arthur Lane said he was in constant contact with the government of Premier Simovic, having had 15 separate interviews with the premier, foreign minister and other cabinet ministers since Friday.

Lane said the nature of the help Yugoslavia sought from the U. S. "is a military question."

Gloat Over U. S. Strikes

ROME.—(P)—The Axis has given Yugoslavia a few more days to make peace with it to escape attack, it was indicated Saturday in an editorial by Virginio Gayda, authoritative journalist of Fascist Italy.

Gayda's statement appeared a few hours after it was reported in diplomatic circles here that the Italian-Yugoslav frontier had been closed.

Accusing Britain of seeking to form a new front against the Axis in Yugoslavia, Gayda wrote that "the next few days will say if another state of Europe not at all interested in the conflict will be dragged into war."

Earlier, Gayda stated that American aid to Britain threatened to start a social war in the U. S. and said the evidence was in the present wave of strikes.

Not only are the strikes disrupting the flow of war supplies to Britain but also since they are "caused, as is known, by a request for increase of wages" they "threaten to upset American economy and hamper post-war trade expansion."

Police Recover Stolen Auto

Negro Being Held for Federal Authorities

Recovery of a stolen car here late Friday afternoon, the fourth within the past 3 months, and the arrest of Curtis D. Bruce, negro, charged with theft of the automobile, was announced Saturday by city police.

Local police arrested Bruce on suspicion. A check with the Key West, Fla., police department revealed the automobile, a 1940 Mercury, has been missing since April 1. The automobile belongs to Ralph DuBrevil, of Key West.

Bruce is being held in jail here and will be turned over to federal authorities. Police said Bruce had papers showing he belonged to the U. S. Navy and was on furlough. The furlough expired March 21.

Police Chief J. W. Jones and officer Leo Compton made the arrest.

Recovery of a stolen car here late Friday afternoon, the fourth within the past 3 months, and the arrest of Curtis D. Bruce, negro, charged with theft of the automobile, was announced Saturday by city police.

Adigrat is 40 miles east of Aduwa, scene of the Ethiopian's route of the Italians in 1896, and the place where the Italians won their first victory in the invasion of 1935.

It is about 80 miles south of Asmara, captured capital of Eritrea.

(A Reuters British news agency dispatch to London said Aduwa had been occupied.)

Italians were streaming south by the main road south of Asmara toward Addis Ababa.

A "Free French" pilot who flew over the whole area Friday said he counted 400 trucks tearing south on the road toward Makale.

"They gave the impression they were just running for it," he said, and appeared to be making no preparations for a large-scale stand.

The total number of prisoners counted after the fall of Asmara, meanwhile, mounted to 4,000 Italians and 600 native troops.

At its narrowest point, Bering Strait, which separates North America and Asia, is only about 56 miles wide.

Our Democratic Federal Republic

We're all talking about democracy these days. But we don't always mean the same thing. We speak of the United States as a democracy, and so it is in the broad sense, but that isn't the same thing as merely having a republic. Let's try to define some of these things more closely, so that when we use the words we'll all know precisely what we're talking about.

First, democracy. Democracy is a general condition of society, a way of life, not a mere form of government. It is a condition in which all men have equal rights, none has special privileges, and equal opportunities are open to all, in which all men join freely in governing themselves. Thus England, Norway, and Sweden, all monarchies, have been as much democracies as the United States.

America's Men of Science

Dr. Frank B. Jewett — Wraps Telephone Around the World

This is the eleventh of a series of 12 articles introducing you to America's foremost scientists.

Behind the telephone in your living room or on your desk there is one of the most efficient and streamlined research organizations in the world. The man who for more than two decades has headed that great World War he has assisted the government in its application of science and research to the general welfare and defense. He is now a member of the National Research Defense Committee.

At 61, Dr. Jewett is a leading and active exponent of organized research on a large scale, which is the modern equivalent of the lone inventor in the garret of a generation or two ago. Science developments that have remade so many industries in recent years would be impossible without teamwork in research such as is carried on in the laboratories of great industrial concerns.

This method of research has direct application to our defense effort. Dr. Jewett believes. While the modern war machine may not be as complex as the dial telephone, the same methods of research mobilization and coordination can be used to create it. If a potential enemy nation marshals its forces by using carefully built schedules like an efficient factory, Dr. Jewett feels strongly that our nation must match such efforts by even more effective research and production.

NEXT: Machines with brains.

Dr. Frank B. Jewett

cradle of industry—the Bell Telephone Laboratories—is Dr. Frank Baldwin Jewett.

With the assistance of a thousand and more physicists and engineers, Dr. Jewett has literally placed our ears in any far corner of the globe whenever we call the number. Alexander Graham Bell's telephone has metamorphosed into an instrument that gives a connection at the twirling of a dial. It spans continents and oceans.

Keeps your telephone ringing.

Dial Phone Has "Brains"
The dial telephone, product of Dr. Jewett's research "factory," has been described by him as coming closer to simulating the operation of an intelligent human being than any other structure created by man.

Improvements upon the telephone have not been the only products of the Bell Telephone Laboratories. Dr. Jewett's associates have developed and given the world such important inventions as talking motion pictures, the modern electrical phonograph of high quality, transmission of pictures for long distances over telephone wires, and the high-speed cable.

Mobilizes for Defense
As president of the National Academy of Sciences, which is the highest elective office that American scientists can give a colleague, Dr. Jewett presides over the senate of American science. Since the days of the first 60—many believe that Norway and Sweden have been more so.

The United States is a democracy. It is not a perfect democracy, of course, for it is here on earth, not in heaven. To the extent that all men do not have equal rights, that they do not have equal opportunities, that any has special privileges, to that extent we have failed to achieve democracy. But we have achieved a great deal, and democracy is simply a struggle to achieve the democratic ideal.

Note that the totalitarian ideal is the direct opposite. In Russia, a single class, the proletariat, is conceded all power, and there are no inherent rights for anybody else except as the only permitted party, which claims to represent the proletariat class, chooses to grant them. In Germany and Italy a single party has all the powers of government; whole races and classes are excluded from having any political and social rights except as that privileged class (party) chooses to grant them. The ideal, the goal, is diametrically opposite to our own.

Now, a republic. A republic is simply a scheme of government by elected representation. It might or might not be completely democratic, though today the two usually go together. There have been republics in which only small classes had any political or social rights. Our republic is a democratic republic.

Further, it is a special kind of republic—a federal state. That is, like Switzerland, one in which various political units (states here, cantons in Switzerland) are joined together in a central government made up of those units. A federal state might be neither a republic nor a democracy.

The United States is all three. It is a federal union of states, forming a central republic government—that is, a government run by popularly elected representatives of all the people, limited by a fundamental law or constitution adopted and modified by all the people. But most important, the United States is a democracy; a society consciously committed to struggling always toward the shining goal of equal rights for all, special privileges for none.

Long live our democratic federal republic!

Salon Smartness Rules Budget Dress Shop

By MARIAN YOUNG
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—The budget department is so full of new, smart and flattering spring dresses that only a perverted hard-to-please creature could shop for a day or two and not find several frocks to suit her taste as well as her pocketbook. This is indeed a season when designers of low and moderate-priced dresses deserve loud and generous applause.

Gone are the days when distinctive prints were to be found only in the departments for shoppers in the high-income brackets. The girl who has to think twice before paying even ten dollars for a dress no longer is forced to take a nondescript print or else no print at all. This year, for her approval, budget shops in all stores offer quantities of those chic, widely-spaced designs that look hand-painted, and wonderful florals, with the flowers as clearly defined and fresh looking as newly-cut blooms from a spring garden.

Your Choice of Color Combinations

In addition, there are stunning navy and white, black and white, and brown and white checks in rayon crepe, faille and silk. And there are plaids, too, and stylized motifs in all sizes and shapes.

Among the monotonies, it's possible to find silk and sheer wool crepe coat dresses as well as some which look like coat dresses but aren't. The latter often have fly front effects or a thick rope of material straight down the front.

There are suave two-piece models with the new, longer bodices and beautiful, knife-pleated skirts. One of these, in navy blue rayon crepe, has a huge, flattering collar of crisp white organdy with pleated edges. The new longer bodices shirred becomingly at the waistline. It costs less than fourteen dollars.

For excellent value, a beige wool redingote over a brown, beige and cream print dress just can't be beat. The redingote is lined with print to match the dress and is trimmed with deep, V-shaped quilted pockets. Dress an extra coat less than eighteen dollars, and the coat would be just as smart over dresses in soft, solid colors as over print.

Just as easy to find in budget departments are in custom-made salons are: dresses with pleurms in every length and every degree of fullness; the new rounded shoulder line; dulan sleeves; the slim frock with fullness draped at one side; the dress with matching jacket, lined or unlined; the dress with full-length coat, in silk or wool; cranes, too, long and short; crisp lingerie touches.

Built Wardrobe Around a Plan

Furthermore, it's no more trouble to find a basic dress at less than fifteen dollars than to find one at five times this amount. And the wise shopper, whether her budget is limited or not, always has at least one basic dress in her wardrobe. It's the little model that can go anywhere and does.

Good materials, excellent designs and low prices distinguish these two charmers for smart Easter wardrobes. The purple rayon crepe model, at left, looks like a coat dress but is really a one-piece affair. The printed suit, right, with black and white circles on a red background, includes a practical but handsome dress with high, shirred neckline and a snugly fitted jacket with pouch pockets.

SERIAL STORY

DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

BY EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: Toby refuses to let Anthony move in. They plan a party, discover that Toby is much to love with a clerk in the comptroller's office. They go to a show, sit in the balcony, then to a dance hall. He is delighted with the sincerity and fun. She begs Anthony to dance.

LOVE ON DIMES
CHAPTER XXIII
THE orchestra was a famous "Big Name" band, and when you danced to their music, you understood exactly why. Beatrice had danced until she was breathless. She had danced with Anthony, of course. But she had danced with Terry, too, and with Sam McArdle, and with a dark-eyed lad who had come whooping to their table when he glimpsed Vera.

"Our production assistant, at Simon's," Vera explained.

"She means goat and burden bearer," said the boy. "May I bring my girl over?"

He brought her over. She was a stenographer and pretty. She danced with Anthony, and Beatrice danced with her boy-friend. But they went back where they belonged afterward, and Beatrice remembered the night she had taken Clarence away from Mini Frothingham and felt a new and puzzling shame.

Toby devoured sandwiches and Terry kept going back to bring more drinks. Anthony held Beatrice's hand, under the table, every chance he got, and piled her with food.

Vera teased Sam McArdle. "So you work with figures. How strange. So do I. My own figure. Hey, hey, wait a minute, don't blush! I was only trying to be cute!"

Once Anthony clutched Beatrice and whispered, "There goes a Budge Fashion or I'm blind."

"With the wrong accessories," said Beatrice.

But that was bad, because it made him remember.

THERE was no terrace to which they could wander, but they managed to be satisfyingly alone in that crowded, noisy place just the same. Vera and Terry went back for more food, and Toby dragged Sam McArdle off into a corner.

"You really like this?" Anthony asked. "I keep thinking you ought to be in Twenty-One. Or El Morocco. Or the Rainbow Room. Not that they'd let me in."

"Of course they'd let you in! Don't be silly! You'd be an ornament."

"You're so beautiful, Bee. I like the way your nose turns up. And your mouth's so tender."

"Just made for kisses, I suppose," she jeered. "Go ahead, if you want to."

"I always want to."

"Especially on sidewalks, and in a crowd, and just anywhere like that, where it's so suitable."

"Then you should stop looking so lovely! Oh, Bee, every time I look at you, you've grown more beautiful." He stooped and kissed her forehead, tenderly. "That's my mark. You belong to me."

"I feel it burning," she whispered. "Like a star on my forehead."

A girl passing by glanced at them quizzically. "Ain't love grand," she murmured to the man behind her.

Defiantly, Anthony kissed Beatrice again.

"I ought to die of shame," she thought. "But I love him so. I want to shout it from the rooftops. I love him. He's mine."

Where was the controlled, poised Beatrice now? Where was the self-assured, queenly girl who could sail into the most exclusive night club and make the head-waiter quail? Where was the girl who had wanted Clarence as she might want a new toy?

"Bee, will you mind waiting? It may be a year—it may be two years, or three..." Now Anthony was gloomy. "You'll get tired. You'll meet someone else. Oh, darling, I couldn't bear it if that happened! Look here, promise me you'll never look at another man."

"Build a fence around me," she teased. "Put blinders on me."

"Don't," he groaned. "I love you so, and when will we be able to get married? We'll be old and gray before Huntington's pays me enough!"

She smiled secretly. "Here

Lou Nova Whips Playboy Baer

Scores Technical Knockout in 8th Round

NEW YORK—(AP)—The playboy of the ring had all the laugh knocked out of him Friday night—probably for keeps.

Lou Nova, a guy with a chin of half cement and half iron, and as determined as a supreme court decision, stopped Maxie Baer in eight rounds and probably gave the exking of the playboys all the fight he'll want from now on.

With a sell-out crowd jamming Madison Square Garden Nova took the great right-hand shot of the great Baer right on the chin for seven rounds—and then made Madcap Maxie "holter" twice.

He stabbed Baer's left eye half closed. He raised a "mouse" under the right eye. Then he dropped Max with a short right for a count of nine in the eighth. Then he floored him with the same thing again. Max bounced up at the count of two this time, but referee Arthur Donovan realized he'd had enough for the evening and halted the bout right there with Nova a technical knockout winner at two minutes, 18 seconds of the eighth.

Altogether, 22,114 paying customers were packed into the arena to see this most talked-of heavyweight tussle of the year. They contributed to a gross gate of $38,544.77, which, at $1.50 as the top price, marked a triumph for both fighters, and especially for promoter Mike Jacobs.

Bright Bands and Two-Tone Effects Pep Up Men's Hats

By NEA Service
NEW YORK — Any bright young fellow who goes window-shopping among the men's shops, toying with the idea of snatching himself a snazzy hat to top his Easter outfit, will have plenty of choice. For men's spring bonnets this year are pretty swell. The newest ones manage to achieve color and variety without looking freakish. Of course, the chap who clings to the standard-model fedora in plain gray or brown will find plenty to suit him, too.

Headline color news in men's top-dress is the two-tone hat, with dark brim and a crown of contrasting light shade. A dark brown brim teamed with a light tan crown is typical. Another two-tone idea is to have just the under-side of the brim in contrasting shade.

Paralleling the popularity of covert cloth for spring coats, covert color is the leader among solid shades. As you probably know, covert is a tannish mixture of brown, gray and green. A related new hat shade is khaki (no gags about the draft, please) which is more yellowish. This contrasts well with the new handbands of subdued bronze, blue and green.

Handbands themselves, incidentally, make spring news. They have more personality and zip than in many a moon. The new gabardine bands go well with spring suits of that fabric. There are bands that contrast with the hat's color, the draped pugree (swiped from straw hats) various pleated effects and a whole slew of club stripes and two- and three-toned shadow stripes.

Most popular of the new shapes seems to be that with the crown rounded at back and pinched in front. Pre-shaped crowns, some with creases stitched down, offer a hat shaped better than a man usually is able to do himself.

If There's Dirty Work at Defense Cross Roads, Show-Me Senator Plans to Unmask the Villain

WASHINGTON — An investigation of 40 billion dollars (you're supposed to genuflect whenever a sum that large is mentioned) will get going in Washington April 7.

It will be Senator Harry S. Truman's special 7-man committee to investigate national defense—where the money is going or has gone. If the serious, hard-working senator has his way, it will be neither a whitewash nor a smear of the defense machine. The chairman will always be from Missouri, and they'll have to show him—show him where the $40 billion went, and how much of it went down the drain pipe.

That part of official Washington which has anything to do with national defense has been waiting with considerable trembling for the Truman show to open, fearing a witch hunt, hoping that the committee wouldn't "get any thing on them. When the senator delivered his opening blast at defense extravagance, citing a number of contracts which looked funny, copies of his speech were carefully filed away. It looked as though he had the goods.

First witnesses to be called will be the secretaries of war and navy, then from Missouri, and they'll have to show him—show him where the $40 billion went, and how much of it went down the drain pipe.

An Opportunity

If anyone were to ask me what is the most important service that a farmer can perform for his fellow farmers I would say "to help organize the unorganized."

Agriculture in New Hampshire and in the nation as a whole is in crying need of more organized strength. This need grows more urgent every day. After the present war threat it will be imperative.

Organization, then is agriculture's most important job. As it happens it is a job everyone can do. I think it is fortunate that the greatest of all services to agriculture can be performed by any farmer or farm homemaker.

The contribution the individual makes towards agriculture's organized strength can be easily measured. How many new members did you bring to Farm Bureau last year? That is the measure.

The number need not be large to represent a great contribution from you to your organization. One or two, six or ten — there is a difference, but the important thing is that you be one of the live and growing cells of the movement.

It is true of course that one cannot always measure such accomplishment in numbers of members. You might be one who points out the necessity of organization in season and out and yet you never have occasion to solicit membership. Nevertheless your contribution would be great.

But on the whole, the man or woman who gets the members is the one who is building the strength of agriculture.

For that reason I want to call to your attention the opportunity for service which is offered by the state-wide membership campaign this month. It is your chance to devote a day or two to the protection and improvement of the way of life you love.

I hope you will remember when you go soliciting that you are bringing favors, not asking them. Neither you nor I saw the need of Farm Bureau until someone showed it to us.

—George M. Putnam, President
New Hampshire Farm Bureau Federation

Good Pastures Require Seed, Effort, Labor

Cheapest Possible Farm Feed Means Several Years of Labor

The establishment of good permanent pastures—the cheapest possible feed that a Hempstead county farmer can have—requires several years of effort, considerable labor, and some money for seed and fertilizer. Oliver L. Adams, county agent, said today.

The best permanent pasture consists of a base grass and several legumes. The legumes not only add to the quality of the pasture, but usually extend the grazing season by furnishing grazing about 2 months before the base grass comes into production. Studies conducted by the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture show that the most useful and practical base grass is Bermuda, because of its ability to produce under heavy grazing, and come back after hard freezes and severe droughts.

In Hempstead county Bermuda grass can be supplemented by carpet grass on bottom land, Dallis grass on the more productive soil and redtop on wet land. Hop clover, white clover, bur clover, and lespedeza are all recommended in the permanent pasture.

A good permanent pasture cannot usually be established in one year, because the base grass should be well established before the clovers and lespedeza are seeded. For this reason it is recommended that the base grass be put out one year and the clovers be seeded later. If the base grass and the clovers are put out at the same time, the clovers usually make more rapid growth and prevent the base grass from becoming well established.

Bermuda grass can be established by seeding or by sodding. If conditions are ideal, seeding may be the quickest way. However, since preliminary results of experiments indicate that requirements for seeding are exacting, sodding is recommended in Hempstead county. Bermuda may be sodded during most any season of the year, though spring or early summer is the best season. Bermuda may be sodded in a cultivated crop, such as corn or even cotton. The cultivation given the crop aids in establishing and spreading the Bermuda and may not seriously reduce the yield of the crop. The Bermuda may be established by breaking the land and dropping the sod pieces in the furrow, and covering them with the next round of the plow. The sod should be about 3 feet apart in furrows which are about 3 feet apart.

It is recommended that the pasture be fertilized with 3 to 5 tons of manure or 200 to 300 pounds of a 4-12-4 fertilizer per acre at the time it is sodded. After it is sodded the pasture should be cultivated or mowed to keep down competing weeds and hasten the spread of the grass.

who did the work, explaining why they made deals and how.

Try Boys De Luxe

The seven senators, not too distinguished to begin with, will all be distinguished if they are able to unsmile defense, though they will sit more as judge sat the hearings. Actual investigation will be in the hands of Hugh A. Fulton and Charles Patrick Clark, and the committee could not have obtained much better talent.

Fulton, 32, round and blue eyed, is the quiet digger. He made his reputation as prosecutor in the Associated Gas and Electric clean-up which resulted in the conviction of the rily poly utilities man, Howard C. Hopson.

Clark is the iron-gray fighter type of investigator. He has been prober for a number of Washington investigations—education and labor, I. C. C., the Gillette committee on campaign expenditures, and wire tapping.

Truman's committee has only $15,000 initial appropriation, which is little enough when you consider that it's investigating $40 billion, but what is lacking in expenses is made up in authority to probe types and terms of contracts, methods of awarding, subcontracts, geographic distribution, effects on labor and migration of labor, practices of management, bonuses, extra costs and the old blanket subject of "such other matters as the committee deems appropriate."

May Lead to Prosecutions

The idea is that the committee shall report its findings back to the senate, but as dirt is uncovered it may be turned over to the Department of Justice for prosecution. If the investigation strikes pay dirt, there is no question but that the senate will grant it additional funds to keep going.

Senator Truman, who comes from Independence, Mo., was a field artillery officer in the 35th division during the war, and is now a colonel of field artillery reserve, as is his secretary, Colonel Vaughn, of St. Louis. Truman's interest in military affairs has stuck with him, and his observance of the sloppy way in which contracts were let and handled for the construction of Ft. Leonard Wood, the seventh corps area training center near Rolla, Mo., was one of the things that first got him interested in waste of money on defense projects.

He went on from there to uncover abuses in the letting of contracts for defense manufacture in the Kansas City and St. Louis areas, and in the acquisition of sites for army posts. The more he dug, the more he found, and the investigation resulted.

As a Missouri county judge, Truman supervised the letting of $80,000 worth of road contracts. He has been in Washington for six years, where he has distinguished himself by making speeches only when he had something to say, which was only once or twice a year. He gets to his office at 8 in the morning and works late at night, mostly studying. Last congress, he belonged to a "30 Every Thursday" luncheon club of senators, where the check had to be just that,

Short, Short Story Of a Tall Girl's Growing Troubles

Lucie Neville is pinch-hitting for Paul Harrison, now touring army camps and defense industries.

By LUCIE NEVILLE
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — Charlotte Greenwood doesn't know how tall she is, though height is her stage and movie trademark. Her vague guess is somewhere around 5 feet 9 inches, or maybe it's 10 inches. She hasn't measured in years, not because she's sensitive about it, but because it wouldn't make any difference to her fans. They'd continue to class her as a giantess, even though a lot of them, in the younger cod-liver-oil-nurtured generation, are not more than an inch shorter.

"I remember when youngsters used to come backstage to see me after a matinee," the comedienne said. "They'd be so tall they'd almost have to duck to get in the doorway. They'd stand towering over me, and beam, and say, 'Mama says I look just like you, Miss Greenwood.' Maybe I looked taller to them on the stage, or maybe they just too it for granted because my publicity continually remind me forcibly—like that mirror in my dressing room at 20th-Fox. It's a round one, hung above a low, modern dresser, and all I can see of myself as I come in is my middle section. Oh, the mirror's all right when I sit down. If I don't sit too straight."

She Sits on Her Back

"It's the same way at theaters and movies, even when I go bareheaded. Somebody is sure to tap me on the shoulder and ask, 'Madam, will you please remove your hat?' and have to explain that it's all me—just head and hair. What they really mean is 'Will you please take off your head?' So I just have to slide down and sit on my spine, with my knees shoved into the back of the seat ahead."

Regular-sized beds never give her room to stretch comfortably, and she has worked out a ballet posture, with her toes pointed out straight and her ankles arched, so that she does not lank out the covers. Something ought to be done, too, about the hospital-technique of bed-making: sheets and blankets are tucked in as tight as a strait-jacket, so there's no slack to cover her shoulders.

Sometimes being taller than average has its advantages, she said. "I'll never forget the little man who sat next to me at the Dempsey-Tunney fight. He had come all the way from the middle west, paid an outrageous price for his ticket, but could not see a thing! Nobody would stay seated, of course. So he'd look up at me and ask plaintively, 'What are they doing now?' and I'd yell down, 'Tunney just drove a hard right to the jaw—they're saving in the center of the ring—it's nearly the end of the round.' He might as well have stayed at home by the radio, poor little fellow."

Dance Around the Maypole

All these tall tales some day are going into a book "which probably will be called 'Bits and Pieces,' because that's the state of the manuscript just now and there's no continuity planned. There'll be the story of her first chorus job when she wore pads under her thighs. After one look, the producer hastily ordered a full-length kimono costume for Miss Greenwood.

Currently, she's capitalizing on her agile legs and face-of-a-100-mugs in "Miami," has several songs, and gaily kicks dead-pan Jack Haley in the pants as they dance a maypole routine. (Miss Greenwood's tip, pole, naturally.)

Walker in Left; Cooper Catches

Bossy's a Help in Making Beer

AP Feature Service
BERLIN — German coos produce "beer" as a by-product of their milk, but it needed Herman Goering's year-long anti-waste campaign to discover the phenomenon.

The brew, of course, doesn't flow directly from the cow, but the ingredients from which beer is made are contained in the milk. It's a fact and no wartime joke, as Dr. Roeder, a chemist, told the German Chemists' association.

The whey, remnant of cheese production, contains the same ingredients which are found in malt and barley. Dr. Roeder claims he has developed a process by which the substances resembling malt and barley ingredients are extracted at little cost.

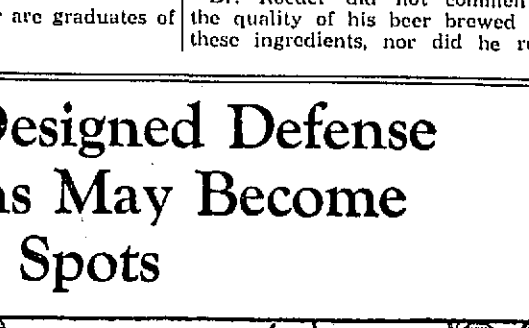

He believes also that the process should be profitable and that an eighth of the Reich's annual beer production—roughly 142,000,000 gallons—could be based on a product previously fed to pigs or wasted completely.

The alcohol content of the whey ingredients is one-and-four tenths per cent, slightly less than that of real malt and barley. Hence more of the extract is needed to make beer.

Dr. Roeder did not comment on the quality of his beer brewed from these ingredients, nor did he reveal on what principles his extraction process works.

Well Designed Defense Gardens May Become Beauty Spots

Flower Borders Combine Well With Vegetable Rows.

There is no need to make your home lot unsightly because of a Defense Garden. In fact there is much real beauty in ordered rows of vegetable plants, whether they are of onions, turnips, or some of the brilliant annuals, such as asters, or zinnias. A combination of the two is most satisfactory, and all it needs is a little planning this time of the year.

A glance at the illustration will show you what can be done without much effort. Here the garden has been divided up into beds combining vegetables and flowers, with boundaries of the larger blooms. They are separated by walks of green lawn, which might easily be made of flagstone, and actually add to the beauty of the landscape. Rows of annuals could be planted alternately with the vegetables, and a border of alyssum, lobelia, or the signata pumila marigold at the edge of the walks, might give added beauty and finish.

This alliance of flowers with vegetables is an old world custom of long tradition, practiced extensively in England and Germany, and particularly suited to the city gardener whose limited space does not permit of too extensive planting. Many of the vegetables of ornamental foliage actually vie with the flowers in attractive display. Such are parsley, carrots, Swiss chard, and that useful herb, sage, the gray-green shoots and blooms of which are as stunning as many of the subjects in the flower garden.

As few or as many flowers as wanted can be put in the vegetable garden in this manner. Straight rows, a definite design, a background of stately delphiniums, or hollyhocks, and a simple edging are all that is necessary to make the garden attractive. A lattice fence with flowering vines, a few berry bushes in the far corners, and a smooth velvet lawn all add to your garden layout.

By all means make a definite plan for your garden this season. Get out pencil and paper, draw a little outline of your available space, and then begin to plan just what flowers and vegetables you want and where to put them. Centaureas, asters, calendulas, scabiosa, ten weeks' stocks and other annuals of compact and upright growth are excellent for this type of planting. Wide spreading flowers will not appear at their best here.

A vegetable and flower garden setting out in the center of the lawn is attractive, or it may be moved further back and enclosed with a lattice fence, a low hedge or shrubbery. Every home has its own problem, and no matter how large or small your back lot may happen to be, there is room enough for a beautiful garden. Make plans now so that you may have the planting season come in just a few weeks.

Cotton Stamps Will Increase Farm Purchase

Sees $2,000,000 Increase Under New Triple-A Program

Purchasing power of Arkansas farmers will be increased more than $2,000,000 this year because of the cotton order stamps to be issued under the Supplementary Cotton Program. County Agent Oliver L. Adams said in discussing the new feature of the Triple-A program. This increase in purchasing power, he said, will be "new business" and will be distributed among practically all merchants in the county.

The cotton order stamps will be received by cotton producers who voluntarily reduce their cotton acreage this year below the 1940 planted or the 1941 allotment, whichever is the smaller, and can be exchanged for cotton goods at any retail store in the county selling cotton goods.

All merchants of the county are expected to cooperate in the program. It will mean added business for them and will increase their sales of other merchandise. The stamps will be treated as cash in purchases of goods made of cotton grown and manufactured in the United States.

The stamps can be deposited at the bank by the merchants the same as money, or they can be sent directly to the Surplus Marketing Administration for redemption. The system of handling stamps will be the same as food order stamps now issued by the Surplus Marketing Administration.

The distribution of the stamps will have a direct effect on the business of merchants in Hempstead county, as it will mean "new business" that in addition to their regular business.

The distribution of the stamps will have no effect on payments received by farmers under other phases of the Triple-A program and will have no effect on other provisions of the program. Participation in the supplementary program is entirely voluntary but a farmer wishing to participate must sign an intention sheet prior to June 15 in order to be eligible to participate.
